William A. Gilmore, Manhattan, cut on head, face and nands,
Mrs. A. Gilmore, Manhattan, internal injuries; small chance of recovery.
Dorothy Strassman, 8 years old, Manhattan; head crushed.
All of the injured were in the automobile party which was piloted by Mr. Gilmore, acting chauffeur.
The automobile, moving at a high rate of speed, approached the Long Island railroad crossing at Wainwright Place.
Darting along the tracks at the same instant sped a crowded trolly car, en route for Rockaway Park.

BUILDING NESTS.

Industry of Birds in Choosing Sites and Making Homes.

(Milwaukee Journal.)
Have you ever watched the building of bird's nest? It is most interesting to observe the birds seeking a desirable lo cation. They hop from tree or brush to tree and brush, talking over together all the advantages and disadvantages of each place, till finally one is decided upon. Then twig after twig is brought and all not exactly working in to satisfaction are discarded. Grass is woven into the interstices and the inside made soft with terstices and the inside made soft with hair, wool or bits of cotton which they pick up. Some birds have a fancy for ornament, and will choose bits of bright colored shreds if placed where they can find them. The joy of the birds in this is expressed plainly and is touching. Then comes their anxiety about their eggs; the patience and faithfulness of the mother bird: the solicitude of the father bird: and the crowning delight, the ecstacy, when a new life breaks out of the shell and a new voice appeals to the parent hearts. What heart is not more tender for seeing this bit of domestic drama enacted before his
